Paul vs. James

by – F.L. Fallis

ALL Bible students know that there is a conflict between the teaching of James and Paul in regard to salvation and justification, as to whether they are obtained by works and faith, or faith alone.

James says:

Even so faith, if it hath not works, is dead, being alone (2:17).

For as the body without the spirit is dead, so faith without works is dead also (2:26).

What doth it profit, my brethren, though a man say he hath faith, and have not works, Can faith save him? (2:14).

Paul says:

Therefore being justified by faith, we have peace with God through our Lord Jesus Christ (Romans 5:1).

Therefore we conclude that a man is justified by faith without the deeds of the law (Romans 3:28).

Now to him that worketh is the reward not reckoned as of grace, but as of debt. But to him that worketh not, but believeth on Him that justifieth the ungodly, his faith is counted for righteousness (Romans 4:4-5).

For by grace are ye saved through faith; ... Not of works lest any man should boast (Ephesians 2:8-9).

Not by works of righteousness which we have done, but according to His mercy He saved us ... (Titus 3:5).

Now if these Scriptures do not flatly contradict each other, and absolutely refuse to be reconciled or interpreted as meaning the same thing, then I fail to understand the use of language.

I am not seeking to raise a conflict between Paul and James. The conflict is already there. I am seeking the true interpretation of each, for both are divinely inspired and are written under the Holy Spirit's direction. Both are true – let us never doubt that – but why this great difference in that which is necessary to salvation?

PAUL AND JAMES CANNOT BE “RECONCILED”

It is a useless waste of time to try to harmonize such directly opposite phrases as occur above. James says faith is dead unless you have works with it. Then, to show how dead it is, he says, “For as the body is dead without the spirit, just so is faith without works.” Of what use is a “dead body”? Faith is just as useless. This admits of no other interpretation. To show the stability of his position, and how earnestly he held to his belief that he was right he asks, “If a man says he has faith, can faith save him?” James would certainly say “no!”

There are many explanations brought out to explain or harmonize this passage, such as “If a man just says he has faith, will that save him?” implying ► that the man may be lying, etc. I myself have heard this explanation offered. What did the eunuch say unto Philip? "I believe that Jesus Christ is the Son of God." He just said I have faith. So then this sort of explanation will not stand the test. James means something else. James says,

"Ye see then how that by works a man is justified, and not by faith only" (:24).

According to this statement no man can ever stand justified before God unless he has some works, for he says, "A man is justified by works, and not by faith alone." Then justification is attained by works rather than by faith (for James). Notice the emphatic way he puts these statements. There is no possibility of harmonizing those with Paul's faith without works.

I know one great Bible teacher who, in trying to harmonize these statements with present truth (salvation by faith alone), says, "James is speaking from man's standpoint, while Paul is speaking from God's standpoint." This explanation fails to explain anything; it is his own guess. We prefer to take God's own explanation of the whole matter, for in such a difficulty as this God does not allow any two of His inspired apostles to flatly contradict each other without having ample explanation somewhere revealed in His Word. This could not be, so let us go back and look for it.

God's Word is written to reveal Himself and the purpose which He purposed in Christ (Ephesians 3:11) first to man, then the church, then through that to all celestial intelligences in the universe (c.f. Ephesians 3:10-11; 1:10; Revelation 4:11).

Through His Word we learn that God has created the heavens and the earth (Genesis 1), all for the purpose of displaying to all created intelligences His manifold wisdom and purpose in Christ (Ephesians 2:7; 3:10-11). Now consider these two, the earth and the heavens. God's manifold purpose concerns all of these spheres, to establish people and inhabit all for His eternal glory through Christ Jesus our Lord.

Now the point I wish to make clear from the foregoing is that God has created these spheres for the final and eternal destiny of mankind, for in the final analogy according to His Word, we find man inhabiting each of these.

Paul Our Guide – Christ Our Goal

ISSN: 1936-9360

Volume IX, No. 215 – November 17, 2009

This weekly publication (52 times a year) is dedicated to:

- the proclamation of the riches of God's abundant, exceeding grace (Romans 5:20; 11:6; Ephesians 1:7)
- the affirmation of God's purpose to save all mankind through the death, burial, and resurrection of Christ (I Timothy 2:3, 4; 4:10; Titus 2:11)
- the "preaching of Jesus Christ, according to the revelation of the mystery, which was kept secret since the world began" (Romans 16:25)
- true freedom and liberty apart from the law (Galatians 5:1)
- the organic nature of the church, the body of Christ (I Corinthians 12)
- the distinct ministry of Paul, the apostle to the Gentiles (Romans 11:13)
- the importance of receiving all whom Christ has received (Romans 14-15)
- the recovery of rich Biblical truth that has too long remained hidden under the veils of traditionalism, prejudice, misunderstanding, and fear (Mark 7:7, 13).
- the completeness of the believer in Christ (Colossians 2:10), with ...
 - total forgiveness of sins (Colossians 1:14)
 - identity in His death, burial, and resurrection (Romans 6)
 - adult sonship position (Galatians 4)

This publication is a joint effort of a few members of the body of Christ. It is a product of our individual lives and ministries together. We do not claim infallibility for its contents. Our readers are asked to be as the Bereans and search the Scriptures (Acts 17:10-11; I Thessalonians 5:21).

This publication is not connected with any "church," "denomination," "movement," "organization," "mission," "creed," "meeting," "school," "conference" or "fellowship."

It is nowhere revealed that all mankind have their eternal destiny up in heaven. Neither is it revealed that earth, even the new earth, is to be the final destiny of all men. The furthest, most remote occurrence revealed in the Word of God is brought to us by Paul, and it is that final ultimate that, “*God will [at some future time] be All in all” (I Corinthians 15:28). Yet this furnishes no location for the “all.” But all is of God, and all is through God, and all is unto God (Romans 11:36).

HEAVENLY AND EARTHLY SPHERES

Now God has an earthly people, with an earthly inheritance (Israel). This people has an earthly ministry and a commission fitted to them, so as to reveal to them their earthly kingdom glories as promised them in the Scriptures of truth. The Lord Himself said to one of their rulers, “If I have told you of earthly things and ye believe not, how shall ye believe if I tell you of heavenly things?” Heavenly things are still beyond the understanding of that people of God. Let us understand that Israel is bound up with the earth and its coming glories.

It is not given to Israel to understand heavenly things. Therefore their teachers, leaders and those commissioned to minister to them could not unfold to them the heavenly “secret,” the mystery of the church, the one Body, which was hidden in God, during the run of all past ages until announced through Paul, God’s chosen vessel for that purpose.

Then why, I ask, shall we even expect James to agree with Paul, especially when James is writing “to the twelve tribes” (James 1:1) who have their inheritance on earth (Psalms 37:29), while Paul is writing to a people (all in Christ – Ephesians 1:3) whose inheritance is up in heaven, and not on earth at all? How could the same gospel possibly fit both of these peoples? It seems folly to talk about the standpoint of James being from that of man, and the standpoint of Paul being from God.

All Scripture is a revelation from God to man. If James was inspired to write that “Faith without works is dead,” then to those to whom he wrote (to the twelve tribes), faith is dead without works. This is what God said! Then, too, when Paul (who is also inspired) says, “A man is justified by faith, without the deeds of the law [works],” then, to those to whom he wrote (all who will believe his glad message of grace) a man is justified by faith, without works. This is what God says also, and is true.

THE GOSPEL OF THE CIRCUMCISION AND OF THE UNCIRCUMCISION

Let us now consider the two gospels, the two commissions, as proclaimed by the God-appointed leaders of each of these peoples. Let us inquire, “Are they the same gospel only (as some say) given to two classes of people?” Let us see if, according to the Scriptures, they are identical. This is the vital point at issue, for herein lies the conflict between Paul and James. We know that there is a fundamental difference between Israel and the Body of Christ throughout the Word of God, and this difference is kept inviolate and is maintained unto the end.

When James unhesitatingly says that he is writing to the “twelve tribes” he is saying nothing to the church which is the Body of Christ. Now, why not hold this truth just as the Holy Spirit has placed it, to and for the people to whom it was written?

How can God ever get a message through to the Hebrews if the church grabs all, no matter to whom it is written, for itself? This is just what they are doing, regardless of their divinely-given commission to the contrary. Without scriptural authority for our assertions all are at sea.¹ My guess is as good as anyone’s, but we want no guesswork when dealing with the Word of God. If He has not outlined the way, then better await further revelation; but if He has, then follow until death!

We know definitely that there was a commission given to Paul to proclaim to the Gentiles. We know just as surely that a commission was given to Peter, James, and John to proclaim to the Jews, and these were wrought out and given under Holy Spirit’s power and direction (Galatians 2:7-9). We know further that we have no record of the abrogation of either of these two commissions in the Word of God. Let us not make the Word of God of none effect by our traditions.

We read in Galatians 2:7 of “the gospel of the Circumcision” and “the gospel of the ►

1. “At sea” is a figure of speech meaning “in a state of confusion and disorder.” It dates from the days of sail when accurate navigational aids weren’t available. Any ship that was out of sight of land was in an uncertain position and in danger of becoming lost. – Gary Martin, The Phrase Finder, 1996-2009 (– editor)

Uncircumcision.” Are they the same gospel? Let the Word answer.

Paul says,

I went up [to Jerusalem] by revelation and communicated unto them that gospel which I preached among the Gentiles ... (Galatians 2:2).

If this was the same gospel Peter, James and John were preaching, what was the need of explaining it to the elders at Jerusalem? It was not the same. What was it that made it necessary for the Lord to reveal to Paul that he was to go up to Jerusalem?

And certain men which came down from Judea taught the brethren [Paul’s converts], and said, “Except ye be circumcised after the manner of Moses, ye cannot be saved.” When therefore Paul and Barnabas had no small dissension and disputation with them they determined that Paul and Barnabas, and certain other of them, should go up to Jerusalem unto the apostles and elders about this question (Acts 15:1-2).

Now, what was “this question”? It was the same question as that at the opening of this article, the same one that causes the conflict between Paul and James. Is salvation by faith, or by faith and works combined? This church at Jerusalem knew nothing of a salvation without works. So saturated with the keeping of the law of Moses were they that twenty years after Pentecost, they said to Paul,

Thou seest, brother, how many thousands of Jews there are that believe, and they are all zealous of the law (Acts 21:20).

Now anyone should be able to see that the church at Jerusalem, these elders, Peter, James and John, were fighting bravely for a gospel of law-works and faith combined. Nothing else can explain their position here. Why try to warp the Scriptures out of all semblance of what they teach, and force upon them a meaning totally foreign to their intent?

Now while this was going on, Paul was contending just as manfully for his gospel of faith alone without works – without any works as an aid to salvation or justification.

Just here lies the major difficulty, and it is fundamental. This is why it brought on such a commotion that the Holy Spirit Himself came and laid His hand upon the men most concerned in the matter at this conference, and gave unto each his special commission (Galatians 2:7-9).

What was it? That Paul should go and minister to the Gentiles, while Peter, James and John should go and minister to the Jews. Notice, the Holy Spirit is careful to say that there are two gospels here, “the gospel of the Circumcision,” and “the gospel of the Uncircumcision.” It is not the gospel to each, that is, to carry the same gospel to each, but there is a gospel OF the Circumcision (which included faith and works), and there is a gospel OF the Uncircumcision (salvation by faith alone). Now Paul was to carry this latter message to the Gentiles, while the elders were to proclaim the former to the Jews. Further note this: never do we find a record where this was ever changed or canceled, or fused into one gospel.

Note carefully another point: Paul says he went up to Jerusalem and explained “that gospel” which he preached among the Gentiles. Did the Holy Spirit at the conference tell Paul that he must change “that” gospel of his so it would “fit” into that of the elders? Did He? Did He tell the elders to change their gospel to fit in with Paul’s? Did He? There is not even a hint of it. If such a change was ever to be made, here certainly is the place for it to appear – but there is none. This arrangement then is of Divine origin. Let us not,

Make the Word of God of none effect, by our traditions (Mark 7:13).

SALVATION IS BY FAITH, NOT BY FAITH AND WORKS

Therefore, henceforth we know James is proclaiming the inspired Word of God when he says, “Faith without works is dead” (to the twelve tribes, to whom he is writing, James 1:1), because he, and those to whom he writes, are still standing by their divinely-given commission (or rather by their original doctrine of “faith and works”) as coming out into fuller kingdom truth, as expressed also by Peter in his sermon in Acts 3:19-20.

Now, the epistle of James was, in all probability, written some twenty years before that conference at Jerusalem, and this only proves more forcibly that the gospel of the elders of the church at Jerusalem held with James exactly when they said that thousands of Jews “believe but they are all zealous of the law.” The faith and works expressed in James’s epistle is echoed in the church at Jerusalem. They are at one in their teaching. Now this gospel held its “right-of-way” among them just so long as God’s special favor was held open towards Israel.

Peter, one of their elders, said unto them:

Repent and be converted ... and God shall send Jesus Christ, Who was before preached unto you (Acts 3:19-20).

Yet they would not repent (Acts 4:1-3), so this condition continued on to Acts 28:28, where God’s special favor towards this people ceased, and He closed the door against Israel as such, and they sank down on a level with the rest of the nations. They were then, and are still, set aside, as a nation, until the “times of the Gentiles be fulfilled” (Romans 11: 25).

We know as a fact that Israel, as a nation, is set aside today. Surely, then, all that pertained to them alone is as surely in abeyance also. It could not be otherwise. Paul says, “... because we thus judge, that if One died for all, then were all dead” (II Corinthians 5:14). Upon the same basis we will say, because we thus judge that if Israel, as such, is held in abeyance in the purpose of God today, then all that pertained to them – their king, their earthly kingdom, their kingdom gospel, their gospel of faith and works, the epistles written directly to them as such – are all just as surely held in abeyance together with them. This is why Paul and James do not agree.

One writer, who is well qualified to know, has this to say in regard to these epistles to the Dispersion:

In days not far off these epistles will appeal to Israel when to them the gospel of the kingdom is once more proclaimed. To the preachers will again be committed the “powers” of Pentecostal days, to be exercised once more as exemplified in James 5:14-15.

This we believe to be God’s plan and purpose. Therefore we also judge that it is not a matter of “standpoint,” either of James or Paul, but a matter of “Thus saith the Lord.” It is a matter of to whom God is speaking.

Many shelve the whole subject by saying, “Well, were they not Christian Jews to whom James wrote?” Judge for yourselves. They doubtless believed that Jesus was the Messiah, but they believed that works constituted one to be righteous. If they sinned they offered sacrifices according to Moses, kept up circumcision, and were zealous of the law. This is the sort of Christians they were. This, we do not hesitate to say, is “unfinished business,” when salvation by grace through faith alone is reigning. We need no law-works today to make us righteous in the sight of God. It would but tend to make the perfect work of Christ inefficient!

If the epistle of James was written in A.D. 45, as many commentators believe, or the year before the Jerusalem Council, which was held in about A.D. 45 or 46, then we see that James and the great church at Jerusalem held the same doctrines, proclaimed the same gospel, and held to circumcision and the keeping of the law of Moses to constitute them to be righteous, or give them salvation:

For except ye be circumcised after the manner of Moses, ye cannot be saved (Acts 15:1).

THE “SECRET” WAS NOT “REVEALED” TO THE CIRCUMCISION

Paul’s letter to the Galatians was written in A.D. 57, or early in 58. In the first part of this epistle the apostle comes forward with the proof of his Divine authority, and the Divine source of the gospel which he received, setting forth the fact that the gospel which he proclaimed was underived from man (not of the twelve or any other man), but was a direct revelation from the Lord Jesus Christ Himself (Galatians 1:11-12).

For I certify you, brethren, that the gospel which was preached by me is not after man. For I neither received it of man, neither was I taught it, but [I received it] by the revelation of Jesus Christ.”

What gospel was this? Was it the same as that proclaimed by the church at Jerusalem? Was it the same as James had written? Was it the same as Peter had proclaimed? If so, I ask, “Why was it necessary for Paul to have to get it by revelation from the Lord?” The only possible answer is that it was not the same gospel. Then why try to force the messages of ► those who are all zealous of the law, to agree with Paul's new revelation which excludes law?

The teaching of the Bible, with the exception of Paul's epistles, which relate to the Divine purpose in the heavens, follow one definite line of thought – the establishment of the kingdom of God on earth, the culmination and climax of which is seen in Revelation 11:15.

The kingdom of this world is become the kingdom of our Lord, and of His Christ.

What was the distinctive feature of Paul's gospel? There must have been some striking differences or there never would have arisen the difficulties that we find in the Word. In the latter part of Acts 20:24 we have this statement:

*... So that I might finish my course with joy, and the ministry, which I received of the Lord Jesus, to testify, or preach, the gospel of the grace of God.

Let us place other Scripture alongside of that:

That the Gentiles should be joint-heirs, and of the same joint-body, and joint-partakers of His promise in Christ by the gospel whereof I [not the twelve] was made a minister, according to the gift of His grace given unto me by the effectual working of His power. Unto me, who am less than the least of all saints, is this grace given, that I [I alone, not Peter, James nor John] should preach among the Gentiles the unsearchable riches of Christ; [unsearchable riches are riches that have never before been searched out, or revealed. What are they? Listen:] and to make all men see what is the dispensation of the mystery which from the beginning of the ages hath been hid in God (Eph.3:6-9).

Who now rejoice in my sufferings for you, and fill up that which is behind of the afflictions of Christ in my flesh for His Body's sake, which is the church: whereof I [myself alone] am made a minister, according to the administration of God which was given to me for you, to fill out the Word of God: Even the mystery which hath been hid from the ages and from generations, but is now made manifest to His saints: To whom God would make known what is the riches of the glory of this mystery among the Gentiles, which is Christ in you, the hope of glory (Colossians 1:24-27).

Wonderful Word of God! Are the unsearchable riches in Christ circumcision and law-keeping? Is the "mystery" that was "hidden in God through all past ages," seen in the epistle of James? Do you find it revealed in the church at Jerusalem? Do Peter, James or John have a single word to say or write concerning it? If they do, then it was never "kept secret" (Romans 16:25) until after Paul's conversion.

The epistles of the elders of the church at Jerusalem have no place in the dispensation of the mystery. Why should they? They are definitely written to and concerning another people altogether, and their writers admit the same. God's Word teaches us that Paul was God's chosen vessel to unfold the "mystery" unto the Gentile nations. Why should we struggle, fight and fume to have all the other writers declare the same thing, when from the very beginning it was held separate? What is the use of Paul's writings if Peter, James and John wrote the same things to the same peoples?

What is the use of God having a people who were chosen from before the foundation of the world, a people with a heavenly destiny (Ephesians 1:3-4), and also having a people who have a kingdom prepared for them from (or since) the foundation of the world (Matthew 25:34), a people with an earthly destiny, if the church of today is to absorb everything? James does not agree with Paul, and there is a reason. It was never intended that he should.

Let us leave some of God's writings for those that shall come after the Body of Christ is caught away. The Body of Christ will be with Him in glory – praise His name! – but there will be many millions of people left on the earth. What Scriptures will they look to in that dread era? God will write no new book for them – they will have to find their solace in the one we now have. The Dispersion Epistles (James through Revelation) which will then be in effect, will be revitalized by Holy Spirit power, and will fill up the Word of God for Israel in deed and in truth.

A Train Track

by – Brad Meyers

Picture this scene:

A fair young damsel is tied with rope wrapped around her body. Only her feet and head protrude from the bindings. She is lying across a railroad track helpless and unable to move. In the distance a locomotive is approaching, smoke billowing from its stack, the whistle blowing. In a sweet, but terrified voice she calls out for help aware of her imminent danger.

A man in a dark cape and wearing an evil grin is hovering over her, wringing his hands in anticipation. With a villainous voice he says, “For the last time, will you marry me?!”

An onlooker would think, “How foolish, even if she does consent, you will never have her heart!”

Now picture this scene:

A young woman is bound in the bondage of sin and destined for death. Her conscience is at work and she is fully aware of her bindings. She is hopelessly trapped and is looking for a friendly face to save her. She is also fully aware that sooner or later she will die. Quietly, inside she calls for help.

A street preacher is standing on a box as she passes by. With a stern look on his face he shouts, “God loves you!” He continues, “Love the Lord thy God ... or regret it forever!” He then proceeds to demand repentance and describe the endless torments of hell that await her if she does not comply.

An onlooker would think, “How foolish, even if she does repent, He will never have her heart!”

THE GOSPEL?

Yet, this is how the “gospel” is often preached. “God loves you, but if you reject Christ He will have no choice, but to send you to hell forever.” Notice how the preacher’s portrayal of God likens Him to the villain.

Gospel means, “good news.” Is it “good news” that we can choose to love the Lord under duress? Many people believe so. Yet, how can it be true love if it is founded on threats? You might say, “People need to know the bad news before they can know the good news.” True, but the bad news is not eternal misery, and the good news is much better than most believe.

THE BAD NEWS

(All references in Young’s Literal Translation unless otherwise noted)

For the wages of sin is death ... (Romans 6:23).

This is death, not eternal life in misery labeled “death.” In death the thoughts perish (Psalms 146:4; Ecclesiastes 9:5, 10).

Death is likened also to sleep (John 11:11-14; Psalm 13:3; Job 3:11-13; 7:21; Acts 7:60; 13:36; 1 Thessalonians 4:14). In death the body returns to the ground, (Ecclesiastes 3:20; 12:7; Psalm 104:29) the soul goes to hades/sheol (Acts 2:27, 31; Job 7:9; Psalm 16:10), which means “unseen” or “imperceptible” and the spirit returns to God Who gave it (Ecclesiastes 12:7; Luke 23:46).

A helpful analogy is that of a light bulb. The bulb gives light and heat (is “alive”) while it is powered and functioning. When it burns out (dies), the heat (thought) perishes, the bulb (body) decays, the light (soul) goes to the unseen and the power (spirit) returns to its source (o.k., so the power in a bulb doesn’t go back to the power plant, but it’s still a helpful analogy until a better one comes along).

The parable of the Rich Man and Lazarus does not contradict the verses given above. It is a parable referring to the Pharisees, not an account of awareness during death. God’s Word contains no contradictions. When we die our thoughts perish and we are, therefore, unaware that we are dead.

THE GOOD NEWS FOR BELIEVERS

... and the gift of God is life age-during in Christ Jesus our Lord (Romans 6:23).

This gift is for believers only. It is a special time of life after resurrection for them during the last age. The Young’s Literal translates the Greek word aiōnios as “age-during” because this is its literal meaning. It is not “everlasting” as the King James Version (KJV) and its derivatives figuratively translate it.

While believers are alive, non-believers, having been judged, will be in the lake of fire, which is the second death.

And the death and the hades were cast to the lake of the fire – this is the second death; and if any one was not found written in the scroll of the life, he was cast to the lake of the fire (Revelation 20:14-15).

Note that this is the “second death” (see also Revelation 21:8). We have already covered what death is per the Scriptures. Also note what happens to death and hades.

The KJV and its derivatives also say “forever” when the Greek noun aion is used. The KJV also translates the same word (and its plural) as, “world,” “end” and “ages” among other things. This has caused much confusion and has resulted in all manner of doctrines and eschatological scenarios. The literal English rendering is “age” or “eon.”

Even in the plural, the ages have an end.

And all these things as types did happen to those persons, and they were written for our admonition, to whom the end of the ages did come (I Corinthians 10:11; c.f. Hebrews 9:26).

This should readily demonstrate that even in the plural, aion is not equivalent to our English word, “forever.”

Even this phrase, “ages of the ages,” does not equate to “forever.” Revelation 22:5 describes servants reigning “to the ages of the ages.” You may have heard that this phrase means, “ages tumbling upon ages, which represents forever.” Yet, in I Corinthians 15:24 we read that He will be nullifying all ruling and authority. They will reign to the ages of the ages, not for ever and ever.

You may be wondering what comes next if the life referred to in Romans 6:23 is not eternal.

Read on.

GOOD NEWS FOR EVERYONE

For all did sin, and are come short of the glory of God – being declared righteous freely by His grace through the redemption that is in Christ Jesus (Romans 3:23–24).

Romans 3:23 is often quoted on signs and banners and bumper stickers, but have you ever seen it quoted with verse 24? Probably not.

Read Romans 3:21-26. You will see that this declaration is made through Jesus Christ’s faith, that it is for all, that it is upon all who are believing, and that believers are declared righteous in this present time to display His righteousness.

For even as in Adam all die, so also in the Christ all shall be made alive, and each in his proper order, a first-fruit Christ, afterwards those who are the Christ’s, in His presence (I Corinthians 15:22-23).

The same “all” who die in Adam (that’s everyone) will also be made alive in Christ. You may think you see a loophole in these verses that not everyone “are the Christ’s, in His presence,” because not everyone is a believer in Christ. This is true. The non-believers are not covered in this verse, but read on to verses 25 and 26.

For it behoveth Him to reign till He may have put all the enemies under His feet – the last enemy is done away – death (I Corinthians 15:25-26).

After Christ has put all things in subjection to Himself, He will deliver His Kingdom to the Father. At that point death will be no more. When death is done away (including the lake of fire, which is the second death) what is left? Life!

Instead of simply stating that non-believers will be made alive later, Paul actually describes in detail how it will happen. All other enemies are not done away, but are put in subjection to Him. We believers were once His enemies. We are now under His feet. Some day everyone will be.

So, the believers are made alive first and enjoy a special time of life that unbelievers will not have. Later, when death is done way, the non-believers are made alive as well. This is the meaning of I Timothy 4:10.

For, for this we both labor and are reproached, because we hope on the living God, Who is Savior of all men – especially of those believing.

The book of Revelation is at the end of the Bible, but the end of the Bible is really in I Corinthians 15:28.

And when the all things may be subjected to Him, then the Son also Himself shall be subject to Him, Who did subject to Him the all things, that God may be the All in all.

Go to your Bible and read I Corinthians 15:20-28 in its context and see for yourself.

That’s how the Bible ends: with God, the “All in all.” To learn more, sit down with three books:

- 1) The Bible version you normally use
- 2) a literal translation such as the Young’s or the Concordant, and
- 3) a concordance.

Search for yourself and see if these things be true.
